WEDNESDAY MORNING, MARCH 22, 1876.

The reports of Major Richards and Chief Clarke concerning the safe burglary mystery will be found in our news columns this morning.

There is a question whether Clymer's tears over the fall of the Princeton candidate, Belknap, were occasioned so much by that fall as by the possibility that further revelations in the same line would develop the "irregularities" of persistent Copperheads like himself and Pendleton.

Mr. Speaker Kern's reticence regarding his action in the Kibbourn case has not saved him from criticism. The idea generally prevails that he has been guilty of a gross error of judgment in permitting a man whom the law directs him to prosecute. The difference between prosecution and prosecution has never been more forcibly exemplified.

And now the House has succumbed to the mandates of Grand Jury, and a structured Messrs. Glover, New and A. Herr Smith to appear before that body and give testimony regarding the transactions of the mythical "Real Estate Ring." Only a few days ago it refused to allow the Lachrymose and his fellow-committees to do the same thing. Did any one drop a remark about consistency?

We print elsewhere an exhaustive account showing the constitutional and statutory powers of Congress, and especially the House of Representatives, over the person and property of citizens. It shows distinctly, and we think conclusively, that in the case of Mr. Kibbourn the House, through Mr. Speaker Kern, has been guilty of the exercise of unwarranted power in placing him, recalcitrant witness though he may be, in the common jail. The article will repay perusal, as it treats of a subject in which every citizen has a more or less direct interest.

Mr. CAULFIELD, of Illinois, was captured yesterday in the House by one of Mr. Blaine's strategic movements. Mr. Caulfield was acting as the champion of a bill for the restriction of Government officers and employees in the manner of spending their money. It makes it a misdemeanor for them to spend money for electioneering purposes. The next move of the Democrats will probably be to prohibit Government officers and employees from voting. Mr. Hoar wished to amend, so as to allow contributions for the purpose of sending documents. He need not have taken the trouble. With the reduced salaries there will be no money to spend even for that purpose. But this was refused by the Democrats. They do not want documents. Their constituencies do not thrive on nor do they much affect literature. Democracy succeeds where ignorance runs riot. But Mr. Blaine, by his fine parliamentary strategy, succeeded in amending the bill so as to include Senators and Representatives in Congress in its provisions. It was a bitter pill for the Democrats, but they were obliged to swallow it.

BOBCKE CONSIDERING THE DUTY OF THE YEAH-TWO CRYSTAL.

It will be admitted by those who have watched the more recent progress of political affairs closely that the influence of George William Curtis, the editor of Harper's Weekly, has frequently been potently in favor of the weak and vacillating and vacillating and vacillating party. Just now he is waging a personal Senator Conkling which savor of personal animosity and that perception which is the main characteristic of the Detective Press. That such a journal as the Weekly should be misused for such a purpose is to be regretted, for the reason that it has been of great service to the country and the party in general. It was formerly entitled to a position among the boldest and most consistent advocates of Republican principles, and was delighted to find itself in the company and to receive the support of the most earnest adherents of Republicanism. Lately, however, and particularly since Mr. Curtis' retirement from the Board of Civil Service Commissioners, its tone and policy have changed. It finds fault with the Administration on the slightest provocation, and scolds its followers with the virago like insinuation of a sordid, scandal-loving old maid. So true is this of its habit of fault-finding that it has been aptly named the mother-in-law of the party. But, as we have said, there seems to be a personal animosity in its attitude. That gentleman's deserved and well-earned prominence as a possible nominee for President seems to have added to this animosity, and in a recent issue of the Weekly he is ranked with a class of men whom it despises. Without arguing the justice of this, and without denying that the assertion is true, we simply assert our belief that few men, if any, have been in public life in this country so long as Mr. Conkling has without having at least incurred a suspicion of wrongdoing, and he has certainly passed through the ordeal, coming out with his skirts clean and unspotted. As a Senator who stood up to the legitimate duties of his position, never neglecting the interests of his constituents at home or such personal business as they may intrude upon him, he is an exceptional model. At the same time his record on the leading political questions of the hour—on the money question and the Southern question, for example—is consistent and thoroughgoing. It is the action of the party faith that has been the time when, during the last Congress, the House was demoralized with investigations of its own seeking; when Republicans were engaged in defiling their own couches; when the Senate itself was almost off its balance; when, in the face of defeat at the polls, there was cowardly struggling and blustering even in the ranks of the party acknowledged as leaders, and when Sumner, Trumbull, Tipton, Schurz and others of like dignity were siding the Opposition by their insidious course, Mr. Conkling was all powerful in restoring confidence and repelling the attacks of the mongrel combination of opponents under whose blows the party had been paralyzing from the field. Before this, while he was yet in the House, and during the stormy days of reconstruction, when the Executive was pitted against the Legislative branch, the same independent and dignified motives inspired his course, and to-day he stands almost without a peer as a man whose vigorous political consistency is unimpaired.

The assaults upon him now are intended to influence the action of the New York Republican State Convention regarding the nomination at Cincinnati. We hope and believe they will not have their desired effect. It is too soon to think of naming the Presidential candidate of the party now, but it is not too soon for the friends of acknowledged party leaders to make their own choice of favorites. Mr. Conkling is as much entitled to the support of New York as Mr. Blaine is to that of Maine, or Mr. Morton to that of Indiana. Besides that, he has already secured a friendly recognition in the West, particularly in Minnesota and Iowa, and is not without friends on the Pacific Coast. The Syracuse convention, at which by instructing its delegates to Cincinnati to vote for Roscoe Conkling, and whatever the final result may be, the Empire State will have honored itself by having honored one of her most brilliant and accomplished sons.

TWO WEEKS BEFORE THE MAY.

It is true that the nomination of Mr. R. H. Dana, Jr., of Boston, as Minister to England was at first regarded as a fit appointment, and the President was very generally congratulated as having made a wise selection. It is true that the nomination to this high distinction or recall any remarkable service he had ever rendered to the State. Whatever of life and popularity surrounded his name—we speak of him as a dead man—had its source in the authorship of a very ordinary book relating to ocean voyagers, as the duty of legal profession he was known as an almost perfect stranger. As a respectable plagiarist in international law, he was born at Cambridge in 1815, and was graduated from Harvard in 1837, and from his birth to the present time he has been in the uninterrupted enjoyment of a family influence and a private fortune, which has enabled him to command a popular respect, but all that while the duties of real merit and bottom; a fine specimen of human majesty, well adapted as a receptacle for cards and perfumed notes, but lacking all the essential qualities of a representative American. However, the supposition was a natural one that his life and position would be a good deal of business, and that he would be a valuable asset to the State. But his letter of the 16th instant to Mr. Boutwell affords conclusive proof that he is as far removed from knowledge of diplomatic cunning and finesse as a jackass is from appreciation of the "zeal" of the "Marriage of Figaro." His utter incapacity to grasp the nature of the position clearly revealed in a mass of unguarded, unedited insouciance to the Senate of the United States which makes the very tyro in diplomacy blush to think how narrow an escape the country has made from having a Minister at the Court of St. James who has not sufficient savoir-faire to be a good deal of business, and who is a disgrace to the name of a Minister.

THE COLORED CONVENTION.

A general and authoritative understanding, a convention composed of colored delegates from each State, Territory and the District of Columbia will meet at Nashville, Tenn., on April 8, 9 and 10, to discuss the question of adopting measures for the relief of the colored citizens of the United States. We regard this as a move in the right direction, and as one demanded by all social and political circumstances existing at the present time. Emancipation, in the order of Providence, was secured at a fearful cost. In the hands of the colored people, it has been a source of trouble and sorrow, and all the rights flowing from it are established by law must be preserved. It is only admitting a fact when we say that a powerful influence exists whose tendency is not only to abridge those rights, but to obliterate them altogether. That influence is concluded within the Democratic party. As ancient and implacable foes of equal rights, it displays an every possible course of its inborn, natural hostility to the social and political advancement of the negro race in America. The ascension to national authority of the Democratic party would be marked by, in the first instance, a complete stoppage of the progress and elevation of colored citizens. It would be a complete stoppage of the progress and elevation of colored citizens. It would be a complete stoppage of the progress and elevation of colored citizens.

"WHY WE LAUGH."

A half hour with the Hon. S. C. Cox's last work, entitled "Why We Laugh," will prove to the reader that his wit and humor is almost as good as his political sagacity. The charge against him of "literary piracy" was not so dreadfully serious as to be insupportable, but his tactics in conducting his case before the Committee on Foreign Relations stamps him not only as a moral coward, but absolutely without a vestige of the qualities and resources qualifying even a vice consul at Liberia. Who is found in the Republic, the Republic is clearly revealed in a mass of unguarded, unedited insouciance to the Senate of the United States which makes the very tyro in diplomacy blush to think how narrow an escape the country has made from having a Minister at the Court of St. James who has not sufficient savoir-faire to be a good deal of business, and who is a disgrace to the name of a Minister. MARRIAGE OF THE MODERN SHYLOCK.

The Jew in the Merchant of Venice has long found his prototype in the more greedy, more avaricious, more personable in his fight for the "pound of flesh." That man is Caleb Marsh, whom New York knows as an aristocratic gentleman, and whose history will record an exaggerated Shylock. Nature has certainly framed strange fellows in her time, and when she holds Marsh's hand, she stamps him with a great upon his chest, and fashions him a veritable Shylock. The testimony introduced into the Belknap case yesterday proves this beyond the peradventure of a doubt. Through the influence of the fascinating wife of the Secretary of War he secured the exclusive control of the Fort Sill post-employment. He then quickly succeeded in having his plans of black-roving and extortion. Mr. Evans, who was in charge of the post at the time Marsh received the appointment, was heavily involved. He had constructed expensive buildings on the reservation; had invested all the money he had in a large quantity of goods with which to stock the establishment; heavy obligations were hanging over him, and the condition of the post was a shambles. He was a man of a Jewish hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? Give me $20,000 a year, and you can save yourself. If you do not I shall out you from your position, and you will be ruined. Come, now, it is your only chance for safety." The testimony yesterday shows conclusively how Mr. Marsh pursued his purpose.
